
Thoracic Cancer Journal Publishes Case Reports

As a dedicated thoracic cancer journal, the Journal of Lung Cancer Case Reports publishes high-quality case reports related to malignancies of the chest, including lung, pleural, mediastinal, and metastatic thoracic tumors. Thoracic cancer case reports play an essential role in documenting rare conditions, unusual disease progression, and innovative therapeutic approaches encountered in clinical practice. The journal provides a professional platform for clinicians to publish thoracic cancer case reports that emphasize diagnostic accuracy, ethical standards, and clear educational value. Articles addressing imaging findings, pathology, surgical management, systemic therapies, and radiation oncology are particularly welcomed. By publishing peer-reviewed thoracic cancer case reports, the journal supports academic exchange and advances clinical knowledge in thoracic oncology.
